The uses of BSG funds are closely aligned with the stated purpose of Perkins IV and include, for example, developing students' CTE skills, developing and expanding CTE programs, providing professional development for CTE instructors, acquiring equipment and supplies, integrating academic and CTE standards, and linking CTE education at the secondary and postsecondary levels through nonduplicative programs of study and career pathways. A common theme can be found in the Carl D. Figure 1.

States need to develop processes and criteria for districts and schools to develop credit by proficiency models to ensure all students have mastered the content and skills required by the state, while providing local education agencies with flexibility to design and implement the curricula and courses as they choose. Industry hosts benefits as much from the experience as their guests. If the information acquired is applied, then teacher participants will be better able to provide students with realistic illustrations of how the content is actually used in practice.

For the purpose of this paper the theme of assisting educators in meeting the State Grants Allocation Formula.
